Early Poetry (1838-1847)

Nekrasov's early poetry is characterized by its romanticism and idealism. He wrote about love, nature, and the beauty of the Russian countryside. Some of his most famous early poems include "The Troika," "The Village," and "The Poet and the Citizen."

Peasant Poetry (1848-1855)

In the mid-1840s, Nekrasov's poetry began to take on a more social and political focus. He became increasingly concerned with the plight of the poor and oppressed, and he began to write poems that exposed the injustices of Russian society. His most famous peasant poems include "The Peddlers," "The Railroad," and "Frost, Red Nose."

Poems of Love and Suffering (1856-1862)

In the late 1850s and early 1860s, Nekrasov wrote a number of poems about love, loss, and suffering. These poems are often deeply personal and moving. Some of his most famous love poems include "O Muse, My Muse," "I Loved You," and "Farewell."

Later Poetry (1863-1877)

In the final years of his life, Nekrasov continued to write poetry that was both socially conscious and deeply personal. He wrote about the Russian Revolution, the plight of the poor, and the beauty of the Russian countryside. Some of his most famous later poems include "The Song of Yermak," "Who Lives Well in Russia?," and "The Prophet."
