1. Make regular contact

The most important thing is to make regular contact with your grandchildren. This can be done through phone calls, video chats, emails, or letters. Even if you can't see them in person very often, hearing their voices or seeing their faces will help you stay connected.

Make a point of scheduling regular phone calls or video chats with your grandchildren. This will give you a chance to catch up on what's going on in their lives and share your own experiences.

2. Send cards and letters

Even in this digital age, there's something special about receiving a handwritten letter or card in the mail. Grandchildren love getting mail from their grandparents, and it's a great way to stay in touch.

Send your grandchildren cards and letters regularly, telling them about what's going on in your life and asking them about theirs. You can also include photos or drawings to make your letters more fun.

3. Visit each other

Of course, the best way to stay close to your long distance grandchildren is to visit each other. If you can afford it, make a plan to visit your grandchildren at least once a year. This will give you a chance to spend quality time together and create lasting memories.

If you can't visit your grandchildren in person, you can still have a virtual visit using video chat. This is a great way to see each other's faces and have a conversation in real time.

4. Use technology to your advantage

There are many different technologies that can help you stay connected with your long distance grandchildren. Here are a few ideas:

- Video chat: Video chat is a great way to see each other's faces and have a conversation in real time. There are many different video chat apps available, such as Skype, FaceTime, and Zoom.

- Social media: Social media is a great way to stay updated on what's going on in your grandchildren's lives. You can follow them on Facebook, Instagram, or Twitter, and they can follow you back.
- Email: Email is a great way to send messages and share photos or videos. You can also use email to set up regular pen palships with your grandchildren.

5. Be patient and understanding

Staying close to long distance grandchildren takes time and effort. There will be times when you miss them and feel left out. But it's important to be patient and understanding. Remember that your grandchildren love you, and they want to stay connected with you just as much as you want to stay connected with them.

With a little creativity and effort, you can maintain a close relationship with your long distance grandchildren. By making regular contact, sending cards and letters, visiting each other, and using technology to your advantage, you can ensure that the miles don't get in the way of your love for each other.
